

16.1.2026*Author

LANGAN, Elise

Title

France and the United States : the competition for university students ; Bologna and beyond

Publication year

2004

Source/Footnote

In: Higher education policy. - 17 (2004) 4, S. 445 - 455

Inventory number

18674

Keywords

Ausland : Frankreich : Studium, Studenten, Lehre ; Ausland : USA : Studenten, Studium, Lehre ;

Ausländische Studenten : allgemein ; Ausland : Europa : Studenten, Studium, Lehre ;

Bologna-Prozess ; Globalisierung

Abstract

The United States and France have actively implemented higher education policies to attract foreign students. In the case of France, European Union educational initiatives are often a means to further policies that are already in place. This article focuses on the response of two diverse French higher education institutions to the EU's Bologna Declaration and its call for standardized matriculation time for degrees, private-sector intervention, external evaluations, and possible entry into GATS. The article also considers the tension between the Bologna Declaration and the French notion of le service public. (HRK / Abstract übernommen)